

Drilling for gold

A MINE backed by minerals giant Andrew Forrest near Wellington will undergo a major drill in the second quarter of this year. Commonwealth mine boss Dr Mike Jones said his Impact Minerals team was confident of discovering new deposits of gold. "Commonwealth is an absolute key project for us due to our success in quickly generating a significant number of high quality gold and base metal targets that could provide a platform for the discovery of new deposits as well as targeting potential extensions to the resource we defined last year of 720,000 tonnes at 2.8g/t Au, 48g/t Ag and 1.5 per cent Zn," he said. "A major drill is planned for Q2 to test multiple targets at the gold, silver, copper, zinc project."
